TV PinGuim has had a remarkable journey with preschool show Earth to Luna! Not only did the Emmy-nominated series become the first Brazilian animation to be acquired by Netflix for its international distribution outside Latin America, but it's also received backing from Discovery.

As Variety reports, Discovery Latin America has partnered up with the Brazilian animation house as the commissioner and coproduce of the show's fourth season, which will air in the second half of 2019.

Earth to Luna! follows a science-obsessed little girl that helps younger audiences discover more about the world that surrounds them and airs in almost 100 countries.

The show will be one of the animations selected for the showcase of buzzy animated TV projects out of Brazil at the Annecy Festival.

In addition, the network has also commissioned from TV PinGuim another kids series titled The Charlie Show, which follows a Sheep named Charlie, who is also a talk show host. It will also air in the second half of 2019.

"We look forward to introducing children to Charlie, our chatty sheep talk show host, who just has to find out more about things in The Charlie Show," said Celia Catunda Serra, Creative Director at TV PinGuim.
